

Chapter 10- Validation and Accessibility

I validated my site with the w3 html validator and it stated that the character encoding was not declared and that the h1 align center attribute was obsolete in html 5. To fix it I added the meta charset utf8 tag and used css to center align the heading. I did this to each one of my personal sites. So each of the sites have already been improved so it validates to the specific schema(s).

Validation is important because it is good to keep your website code updated according to the current HTML. Accessibility is also important because you want your visitors to have a good experience when using your site so they will want to come back again.
